Dear President Lederberg:

Several years ago, you were kind enough to participate in our project on scientific creativity. I told you at that time that I would contact you if, and when, any results pertaining to your participation would be published. The enclosed manuscript is such a planned publication.

I am sending this to you, both for your interest and permission. Rather than trouble you with the task of a formal reply to me at this time, I suggest that I merely set up a deadline which you may use for this purpose. In other words, if I do not hear from you by April 30, I shall assume that you have no comments or objections about my publishing this article as it stands. ✓

Thank you again for your help. With best personal wishes,

Sincerely,

Albert Rothenberg, M.D.

P. S. I hope all goes well with you. My move to Stockbridge has been salutary. A. R.
